LITTLE CHILD IS BURNED TO DEATH

East Berlin Lad, Playing with Matches, Sets Fire to Clothes and Sustains Burns from which he Dies After Hours of Suffering.

After suffering untold agony for more than twenty four hours little William Kehm, the four year old son of James O. Kehm, died at his home in East Berlin at eight o'clock this morning from burns received early yesterday. The child retained consciousness almost until the time of his death.

The little fellow's mother is dead, his father works at the butchering business in York, and he made his home with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Phillips, in East Berlin. With several cousins he was playing in bed on Tuesday morning and, unfortunately, they secured some matches.

All three were just getting up when the Kehm boy lighted one of the matches and his inflammable night gown caught fire. In a moment it was ablaze, the flames shooting over his head. Terrified, his little companions screamed for help, and his grandmother ran into the house from the yard. She picked a blanket from the bed and threw it over the burning child and succeeded in putting out the fire. Neighbors, attracted by the commotion, smothered the flames which were burning the bed clothing.

A physician was quickly secured and he found the little Kehm boy burned all over the body. His face was disfigured almost beyond recognition, his abdomen was terribly burned, his arms and hands and the upper part of his legs were frightfully scorched. The poor little boy suffered the utmost torture but bore bravely the pain and the physician was able to do everything human skill could afford to allay his sufferings.

The boy lingered all day and during the night, death finally ending his agony this morning.

The boy's father was summoned from York immediately after the accident occurred and was with the boy when he died. He was the only child.

FORFEITED GAME

VOTE FOR LIGHT PLANT FOR TOWN

Council Hears Report of Light Committee and then Decides to Build Municipal Plant. Will Next Present their Plans.

Putting the cart before the horse, as President Butt expressed it, the town council unanimously passed a motion at an adjourned meeting Tuesday evening providing for the town's building its own electric light plant. Immediately after passing this motion they followed it with another which provided for the employment of a competent engineer and the submitting of plans, specifications and estimates at the next meeting.

"You are going about this in the wrong way, gentlemen," Mr. Butt said. "A private citizen usually finds out first what a house will cost before he decides to build. Then, if the figure is within his limit, he goes ahead. I think we should act in the same way."

Mr. Stock said preliminary estimates had been secured and he felt the time for a decision had come, whereupon the necessary motions were passed without a dissenting vote. The light committee brought about this action by reporting that they could not reach a satisfactory conclusion with the representatives of the company now operating here, and by presenting some attractive figures for the original cost and maintenance of a borough plant. It would cost complete not more than $8000, said the committee. This is understood to mean that ground can be bought, a building erected and equipped with all the machinery necessary, a line can be built, including poles and wire, and everything put in shape for operation, for the surprisingly low figure mentioned.

Furthermore, prophesied the light committee, it would cost not more than $1500 a year to furnish the town with light, though just how much money for fuel and up-keep will be left after paying a competent man to manage the plant, some of the councilmen fail to see. It was agreed that, if the light committee fails to substantiate the promises it made Tuesday evening, at the next meeting, the motion providing for the new plant can very easily be reconsidered. If, however, they can produce the necessary arguments and the Gettysburg Light Company fails to come down with its bids, the erection of a municipal plant is probable.

Mr. Stock, of the light committee, stated that, if council should appropriate annually for five years the $3000 which they now spend for light, the new plant would be maintained and paid for. The question of the borough's borrowing capacity came up during the discussion and the committee was also instructed to look into this before the next meeting to ascertain whether or not the borough could incur this additional debt without putting it to a vote of the people.

The present light contract expires next month. It is not stated how long it will take to put up another plant, equip it and build the line.

Mr. Stock introduced J. Scott Maltman, an electrical engineer of Baltimore, who presented figures to show that the light committee was correct in its contentions. Messrs. Keith and Beard were absent from the meeting.

Hackmen Get no Refund

Mr. Stock reported for Borough Attorney Swope, who was not present, that he had found no ground on which the hack license of 1912 could be refunded to local hackmen who had paid it, and that to apply to on this year's license would be doing practically this. He further stated that, whereas the hackmen stated but few had paid the licenses two years ago, an investigation of the books proved that only a few had failed to pay. Mr. Swope will present a written opinion on the matter at the next meeting.

Work was temporarily suspended on the curbing at the fourth block of Carlisle street upon complaint of residents that the width of pavements would be changed and damage done to trees. The highway committee was instructed to proceed next with the curbing on York and Hanover streets. They were also instructed to put tarvia in the first block of York street and this work was started this morning.

CHAUTAUQUA SURE FOR NEXT SUMMER

New Board of Seventy Guarantors is Secured to Assure Next Year's Session. This Year's Meeting Comes to a Close.

Through the public spirit of seventy Gettysburg citizens the Chautauqua is assured to Gettysburg for next year.

A canvass of the town was made on Tuesday to obtain a new list of guarantors for 1915 to succeed the thirty guarantors secured three years ago and whose pledges expire on August first of this year. Many people, known to be in sympathy with the Chautauqua movement, were visited and the thirty men who originally secured the summer event for the town will be succeeded by more than twice that number, indicating clearly the increasing popularity of the movement. Many of the original guarantors are on the new list.

The ticket sale for next year has gone along in an encouraging way though the exact number pledged has not yet been compiled. Announcement of this, together with other matters, will be made on Friday evening at eight o'clock in the Court House when a meeting of the board of directors, guarantors, and all Chautauqua enthusiasts will be held and a new board elected. The response to the call for pledges for next year's tickets was very gratifying and it is believed the seven hundred, necessary to insure the guarantors against loss, will be forthcoming.

The Juniors will meet on the lawn of the Meade School building at ten o'clock Friday morning to organize permanently. It is planned that they shall continue throughout the year their activities which were so well started this week.

Little remains of this year's meeting so far as equipment is concerned. The big tent was prepared for removal immediately after Tuesday evening's session and it was shipped to-day to Millersburg, a short distance north of Harrisburg. Mrs. Gregory, the platform superintendent here, has gone to Lykens where she will occupy a similar position.

The sessions on Tuesday were a fitting close to a week of exceptional merit. The Juniors gave a delightful entertainment in the afternoon when they produced "Mother Nature's Garden", a little play into which were brought the games and dances they had learned under capable instructors. Folk songs and dances featured the entertainment while the boys' games gave participants and audience a merry time. Their seven pyramids were specially well done. Those taking the leading parts in the play were Anna Miller as "Mother Nature", Lorene Roth as "Sunshine", Pauline Lestz as "Rain", Keith Berger as "Snow", and Harold Roth as "Jack Frost".

They closed their entertainment with the Chautauqua song and marched off the stage singing "America", the large audience standing.

Victor's Band, afternoon and evening, was better than ever and given an ovation at both sessions. Congressman Mognahan lectured in the evening on "The Function of Law". His talk was a plea for a larger Democracy and laws that would work more to the benefit of the people at large than the privileged few who were keen enough to operate under them to their own advantage rather than to the advantage of the general public. The lecture, though of a high character, was scarcely adapted to a Chautauqua audience and occupied too long a period.

But a word of criticism at the finish of such a highly successful week is scarcely a fitting way to close Gettysburg's 1914 Chautauqua, and the evening audience felt just that way about it so that all expressed themselves as highly gratified from the first session on Wednesday to the closing event on Tuesday.

WILL WORK FOR ANOTHER ROAD

Old Plan of Lincoln Way from Washington to Gettysburg not Abandoned. Would now Make it from Richmond to Gettysburg.

While the Lincoln Highway from coast to coast, through Gettysburg, is now a reality and is expected to be beautified and improved during the coming years, the old idea of a Lincoln Way from Gettysburg to Washington has not been abandoned but is now to be brought forth in a more ambitious form than ever.

Daniel F. Lafean who, while a member of Congress, urged the construction of this road, has again taken up the agitation and, instead of making it simply between the battlefield and the capitol, now proposes that it extend from Gettysburg to Richmond. It is believed that the connecting of the great northern battlefield with the seat of the Southern Confederacy will give the project renewed impetus and will obtain for it the support of some sections of the country which opposed the original plan.

Meanwhile, the towns on the route of the other Lincoln Highway, which has been established from San Francisco to New York, are worrying along for fear they may yet lose the road. York is particularly perturbed in the fear that it may be diverted at Gettysburg and go from here to Washington. That city will soon erect one or more memorial arches in order to show its interest and gain a firmer hold on the highway.

It seems entirely improbable that any further change in the route will be made but the Highway Association, has that constantly in mind in urging various communities to do their share toward beautifying the roadway and improving the road itself.

THANK CONTRIBUTORS

Local Temperance Organization Tells of New Drinking Fountain.

The W. C. T. U. has recently erected a bubbling drinking fountain on the Square, in front of M. K. Eckert's store at a cost of $17.00. Allen Plank contributed the work involved in setting it up, while the price of the fountain was raised in part by contributions from the business people on the west half of the Square and the remainder from the W. C. T. U. treasury. The bubbling fountain has come to be scientifically recognized as the most sanitary and the W. C. T. U. believes its establishment will afford the thirsty citizen as well as the visitor a most welcome relief. The Union wishes to publish their appreciation of the contributions and trust that the people will recognize the effort with a proper sense of gratitude.

HUERTA SAILS FROM NATIVELAND

Former Mexican President Hastens Departure.

PLOT TO ASSASSINATE HIM

Three Men Are Arrested or Inciting Mutiny Among the Presidential Guards.

Puerto, Mex., July 22.—General Victoriano Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, left his country and is on his way to Kingston, Jamaica.

Accompanied by Senora Huerta and their unmarried daughters, Elena Eva and Zelia; General Blanquet, former minister of war; Senora Blanquet and their daughters, General Huerta boarded the German cruiser Dresden.

Another delay has occurred in the departure of the other Mexican refugees. The steamship Mexico, on which they had expected to sail to join Huerta, it was announced, is not coming, and this apparently leaves as the next opportunity for departure the Buenos Ayres, on Thursday. That vessel does not touch at Jamaica, unless by special arrangement, but does call at Vera Cruz, an incident that may be distasteful to most of the Mexicans marooned. Virtually all of them are still aboard the British cruiser Bristol and are too nervous to step on shore.

There was much more in taking the refugees aboard the Bristol than mere courtesy. The scare caused by the reported Constitutional plan to attack the town still prevailed, though many professed to laugh at it. More serious in its consequences was another report, which resulted in the arrest of a lieutenant, a sergeant and one citizen. This was that these three men had been attempting to incite to mutiny the presidential guard, a small detachment of which remained until the last, and even to assassinate General Huerta and General Blanquet.

It was feared that an attack by the rebels would lead to serious fighting and perhaps a massacre if the rebels should be victorious. The soldiers of Huerta's bodyguard, who were not sent back to Mexico City, threw away their uniforms and disappeared in the forest as soon as the last of the Huerta party had gone aboard ship.

The reported plot to assassinate him did not seem to worry Huerta. Shortly before he embarked an officer approached him and asked what disposition should be made of three prisoners. General Blanquet suggested that they be shot at once.

"Oh, let them go," said Huerta with a smile. "Let the rats go. My life has been threatened so often that I have lost all interest in these plots."

Carvajal Opposed to Full Surrender.

Washington, July 22.—Provisional President Carranza of Mexico does not intend to surrender unconditionally to General Carranza and will concentrate his military forces and resist an invasion rather than permit the Constitutionalists to enter Mexico City without previous agreement not to wreak vengeance on the lives and property of those who had supported General Huerta.

This was the information received from authoritative sources in Mexico City by Washington diplomats. It induced pessimism in some quarters over the possibility of an amicable settlement of the revolution.

Another aspect of the situation that was commented upon was that Carranza, while informing the American consul at Monterey that he would receive a commission from Carranza, made it plain that he would do so only to arrange for unconditional surrender.

Fear is still felt that Villa will carry his quarrel with General Carranza to the point of revolt, and will plunge Mexico into a new civil war far more bitter than the one just ending. At the Constitutionalists Junta the official denials of trouble with Villa were less emphatic than heretofore. Friends of Villa were more confident in their assertions that Villa would "get what he wants or put them in a hole."

PATIENT DIES; DENTIST HELD

Wilkes-Barre Doctor Arrested For Manslaughter Because of Woman's Death.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 22.—Dr. P. W. Koons, a dentist, was held under bail here on a charge of manslaughter for having caused the death of Mrs. George Hanis, who died in his office after having several teeth extracted.

Dr. Koons was arraigned before Alderman Frank B. Brown on charge preferred by George Hanis, husband of the victim. He was held without bail for court, but later he went before the county judges and gave $1000 bail for his appearance before the next grand jury.

Several doctors testified that Mrs. Hanis died from heart failure, but her husband contends that the treatment of Dr. Koons caused death.

Fined For Tipping Porter.
Jackson, Miss., July 22.—A. N. Sinclair, a traveling salesman, was fined $6 for tipping a colored hotel porter 10 cents. He is said to be the first person to be arrested under the state anti-tipping law, now two years old. The porter also was fined a similar amount for accepting the tip.

Ahmed Mirza Becomes of Age and Ascends the Throne.

Teheran, Persia, July 22.—Sultan Ahmed Mirza, the sixteen-year-old son of the late Shah, attained his official majority and took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the national council.

The ceremony was brief and took place in the presence of the members of the national council, royal princes, high state officials, foreign diplomatic representatives and their wives.

The little shah, accompanied by the regent, Abul Kasim Khan Nasser of Mulk, drove to the palace in a glass coach drawn by eight white horses.

Large bodies of police and troops were stationed in strategic positions, and the entire route was lined by police and native gendarmes.

WEST CHESTER GIRL SLAYS ASSAILANT

Shoots Through Heart Youth Just Out of Reformatory.

West Chester, Pa., July 22.—Katie Clay, nineteen years old, resisted an attempt to attack her at her home in Maple avenue.

As a result, Thomas Ridgley, nineteen years old, who recently was released from the Huntingdon Reformatory and had just returned to his home, a few doors distant from the Clay home, is dead with a bullet through his heart.

Katie Clay is in prison to await the action of the coroner's jury. Both the youth and the girl are colored.

Ridgley died with a revolver in his hand, with which, according to the girl, he had threatened her in his attempt to attack her.

The youth entered the Clay house and asked for Katie, who went into the parlor to meet him. When she appeared, she says, he made demands which she refused. Then, she says, he drew a revolver, of which three chambers had previously been fired, and attempted to enforce his demands.

The girl says she backed toward a cupboard and took from a shelf a revolver, from which she fired one shot. Ridgley staggered to the street and fell dead. The girl then called the police and surrendered.

Soldier Shoots Woman Dead.

Washington, July 22.—Lee W. Newcomb, a private in the Engineer Corps, shot and killed Mrs. Bessie M. Roberts, wife of Van S. Roberts, a private in the same company, and then killed himself. Jealousy was the motive.

Marine Drowns in Mexico.

Washington, July 22.—General Funston, at Vera Cruz, notified the war department of the accidental drowning of Private John McDermott, of the Marine Corps, while in bathing.

KING PLEADS TO AVERT CIVIL WAR

Tells Conference of Dangers That Threaten Kingdom.

URGE HOME RULE CONCESSION

Monarch Recognizes Gravity of the Situation and Asks Conference to Reach Settlement.

London, July 22.—For the first time in the modern history of England the king recognized that the cry of civil war was on the lips of many of his responsible and sober-minded subjects in connection with the Irish home rule crisis.

The king's speech to the leaders of the various parties called together in conference at Buckingham Palace was grave in its tone, as he told them he regarded them as the trustees for the honor and peace on all and left them to confer in view of reaching a settlement.

He told them their responsibilities were great, and that time was short and advised them to exercise patience and to be earnest and conciliatory in their deliberations.

"It is with feelings of satisfaction and hopefulness," he said, "that I receive you here, and I thank you for the manner in which you have responded to my summons. It is also a matter of congratulation that the speaker of the house of commons has consented to preside over your meetings. My intervention at this moment may be regarded as a new departure but the exceptional circumstances under which you are brought together justify my action."

"For months we have watched with deep misgivings the course of events in Ireland. The trend has been surely and steadily toward an appeal to force and today the cry of civil war is on the lips of the most responsible and sober-minded of my people."

"We have in the past endeavored to act as a civilizing example to the world, and to me it is unthinkable that it must be to you that we should be brought to the brink of fratricidal strife upon issues apparently so capable of adjustment as those we are now asked to consider if handled in a spirit of generous compromise."

"My apprehension in contemplating such a dire calamity is intensified by my feeling of attachment to Ireland and of sympathy with her people who have always welcomed me with warm-hearted affection."

"Gentlemen, you represent in one form or another the vast majority of my subjects at home. You also have a deep interest in my dominions overseas, which are scarcely less concerned in the prompt and friendly settlement of this question."

"I regard you then in this matter as trustees for the honor and peace of all."

"Your responsibilities are indeed great. The time is short. You will know employ it to the fullest advantage and be patient, earnest and conciliatory."

"In view of the magnitude of the interests at stake, I pray God in his infinite wisdom may guide you in your deliberations to that they may result in the joy of peace and an honorable settlement."

The king remained only a short time and then left the conference to their deliberations.

While the leaders were in conference preparations were being made by the chief Unionist organizer for a general election. He sent orders to all the constituencies to prepare for an election three weeks after the conference, as the leaders are convinced that no matter what may be done at Buckingham Palace the house of commons soon must be dissolved.

During the time the conference sat around the table in Buckingham Palace they found an opportunity to discuss many points of difference, and before adjourning touched on the question of the exclusion of the county of Tyrone from the operations of the Irish home rule bill, a point which everybody recognizes as the most thorny one of the whole subject.

The general impression prevailed that the conference will settle this matter, since nobody believes the request for the exclusion of one county will be allowed by eight politicians possessing the ability of the conference to turn the scales for civil war.

Mormons Flee Mob.

Lancaster, Pa., July 22.—Angered by the attack made on the Methodist religion by two young Mormon missionaries, Rev. William May, pastor of the Methodist church at Christiansburg, forced the men to retract their statements. A crowd of 500 persons was attracted to the center of Christiansburg by the attack made on the strangers. The Mormons remained sequestered in their rooms fearing an outbreak, and they took the first train for another point.

Order Change in Railroad Bookkeeping

Washington, July 22.—Railroads after June 30, 1915, will be compelled to keep their accounts to show separately costs of freight and passenger service according to an order by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This information will be used not only for rate making, but to keep the commission better informed how railroads actually conduct their business.

EBBETS PREVENTS BASE BALL STRIKE

Newark Team Buys Nashville Interest in Kraft.

New York, July 22.—There will be no strike of base ball players in the two major leagues.

The Kraft case, the basis for a strike order by the Base Ball Players' Fraternity, was settled by the Newark Internationals agreeing to buy Nashville's interest in Kraft.

Announcement to this effect was made by Charles H. Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Nationals and a large stockholder in the Newark International league club.

Mr. Ebbets announced that Nashville had signified its acceptance of Newark's proposal and that Kraft would report to the Newark team at Providence. Kraft has been under suspension for more than five weeks, ever since his refusal to report to the Nashville club.

In settlement of all claims on Kraft the Nashville club is to receive $2500, Mr. Ebbets announced.

CHASE AWARDED TO FEDS

Supreme Court Dissolves Injunction Against Him.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 22.—Organized base ball suffered a legal defeat when Justice Herbert P. Bissell, of the New York supreme court, granted the motion to vacate the injunction secured by the Chicago American league base ball club restraining Hal Chase from playing with the Buffalo Federal league club.

The lack of mutual obligation in the so-called ten-day clause of the contract under which Chase was playing with the Chicago team, whereby the club could terminate the contract on ten days notice, while the player was bound under several provisions of the national agreement, formed the basis of the decision vacating the injunction.

PHOTOGRAPHER DESCRIBES

James Ware of American Press Association Sees Him at Close Range.

GRAPHICALLY VILLA'S MARCH

Constitutionalist Soldiers Worship Their Leader to the Point of Veneration.

EVERY day for seven weeks in the historic march from Saltillo to Torreón and then on to Zacatecas James Ware, staff photographer for the American Press Association, personally met General Villa, head of the victorious rebel forces in Mexico, and had a splendid chance to make a close study of the general and his manner of conducting the war that meant the elimination of General Huerta. Although General Villa likes all Americans, he took a particular fancy to Ware, and the war photographer, who recently returned from the scene of hostilities, admits that he obtained confidences which he could not be expected to violate. He declares that the people of the United States cannot imagine the idolatrous worship bestowed on Villa by the men under him, and this worship is earned by the rebel general.

"There is no denying the fact that Villa personally is almost wholly responsible for the remarkable succession of victories by the rebel forces," said Ware. "His very presence among the men is an inspiration. All that one has to do is to mention his name to any of the thousands of men in his command. They simply go into ecstasies over him. His word is absolute law. There isn't a man in his army who at the word would not lay down his life for his commander. I never saw or expect to see again such complete admiration. It is not admiration; it is veneration. Villa is regarded as the savior of the people. He is the George Washington of Mexico."

"I joined General Villa at Saltillo. When I got there the first day I was escorted before the rebel general. He truth there was no more evasion. They said that they had bought mesal at two saloons on a street about half a mile from Villa's headquarters. Villa sent two of his trusted officers there. When they came back they had in custody the two guilty saloon keepers who had been reaping a harvest while all the other saloons in town were closed. "They were brought before Villa and admitted that they had received the order to close their saloons under penalty of death. Villa said a few words to his officers, and the two guilty saloon men were taken out and shot. There were mighty few liquor violations after that. Villa seemed to dread mesal more than he did the bullets of the federals."

Villa Thorough Politician.

"While on the field Villa is a fiery soldier, who cares little for his life, as evidenced half a dozen times while I was with him. When the army is inactive he shows in a hundred and one ways that he is a diplomat and thorough politician. He has a wonderful memory. When I have been out walking with him it is no exaggeration to say that he addressed at least 200 soldiers by their first names. He would make a wonderful politician in the United States. And you ought to see some of these privates swell up after Villa had shaken them by the hand and said a few words of cheer. That man was worth two men in a battle just then."

"I'll not soon forget the night that we arrived at Zacatecas. Villa's men had fought that night until nearly midnight. In the center of Zacatecas was a great elevation held by the federals. It gave them a peculiarly invulnerable ed to be wavering Villa was there. He was galloping all over the battlefield, shouting encouragement to his men. But they did not need the word of encouragement. His presence was enough. And he never once lost his head. Once when there was a slight lull in the fighting he galloped to the spot where I had my camera trained.

"You ought to get some good pictures today, Mr. Ware," he said. "But remember what I told you—you will never get a picture of a rebel defeat."

"Shortly after 2 o'clock, when the fighting had continued for four hours, there were signs of weakening on the part of the federals. Their fire wasn't as steady as it was in the early part of the engagement. Villa's men were getting closer and closer. About 3 o'clock there was almost a complete cessation of firing by the federals.

"We have them beaten," said one of Villa's staff generals. "Let us take the hill now."

Deception Is Detected.

"They are trying to fool us," said General Villa after training a powerful fieldglass on the hill. "There is a big force there yet."

"Villa then adopted a ruse to draw the full fire of the forces on the hill. He sent a body of men as if to make a sortie for the hill. He had guessed right, although it cost him the lives of many of his bravest men. They drew a galling fire which proved that there still was plenty of fight left in the enemy."

"Shortly before 4 o'clock Villa decided on a combined attack. He was convinced that the federals did not have much left. He went about his men whispering words of cheer and told them to get ready for a final rally. I never saw such fighting. In less than half an hour Villa's men were on top of that hill and in complete possession of the town."

Ware speaks highly of the treatment by Villa of all Americans. He also declared that the rebel general has a heart as big as an ox; that he is as charitable as he is brave.

"Naturally Saltillo, Torreón and Zacatecas were in awful condition after their capture," said Ware. "In Saltillo Villa distributed 250,000 pesos to poor women. In Torreón he daily distributed 4,000 pesos to those in need. All those made prisoners were pressed into service. They were given the option of taking employment at rebuilding the wrecked cities or joining the army. A great many chose the latter, and they made splendid soldiers. There were certain prisoners of war who were put to death, however. They were the bandits known as the red flaggers and the Colorado. They had taken part in previous revolutions and proved traitors, having joined Huerta's army. They were shot without any ceremony."

Ware Escapes Death.

Ware related some of the hardships he had to endure to get his pictures. He was in the saddle for five days and rode 200 miles on a hand car at night in the rain. On his first trip to Zacatecas he slept in a box car.

"On the way to Zacatecas," said Ware, "we learned that the first train of Villa's army had been wrecked. We made 250 miles to the front in a gasoline car. On our way back on a hand car at night we had to duck outgoing military trains. We didn't know what minute we would meet with a head-on collision. It was a ticklish ride. In the yards at Torreón we ran into an open switch, which threw us twenty feet. The general manager of the telegraph service, who was on the hand car with me, was badly hurt. I got away with slight injuries. Between Torreón and Gomez Palacio we found the bodies of four soldiers on the tracks. Evidently they had fallen from one of the military trains and been ground to death. We also found several open switches, which we reported in time to prevent wrecks of military trains. Villa's men are a wild lot, and while on the train they had practiced lariat throwing at the switch bars. They would whirl the end of the lariat around the switch and put it out of commission. It is marvelous that there weren't more trains wrecked."

Mashed Potatoes.
Creamed Asparagus on Toast.
Lettuce Salad. Cheese Sticks.
Strawberry Ice. Sponge Cake.
Coffee.

THE odds and ends of lettuce left over when a salad is made may be utilized in making soup.

French Soups.

Lettuce Soup With Stock.—Take one head of lettuce and cut fine strips. This may be done with the kitchen shears or with a knife. Cook until tender in three or four tablespoonfuls of butter, seasoning with salt and pepper. Have one and one-half quarts of veal or chicken stock heating, and to this add one cupful of cream. Thicken with the beaten yolks of two eggs, seasoning with salt and pepper and a tiny dash of grated nutmeg. Add the lettuce to this, blend thoroughly and serve very hot with toast.

Dainty and Nourishing.

Lettuce Purée.—Take about a dozen lettuces if you have a garden, you can use those which are going to seed, pick apart, cleanse and throw into boiling salted water till they are quite tender. Then drain carefully and pass through a sieve. Dissolve in an enameled lined saucepan two ounces of fresh butter; stir into it one ounce of flour without letting it color. Then by degrees add the purée of lettuce and stir very slowly while cooking for about twenty minutes. Dilute by degrees with good, rich stock till of the right thickness. Season with red pepper and salt and serve with fried croutons or bread.

Season Well.

Plain Lettuce Soup.—Take four heads of lettuce, wash thoroughly and place in boiling salted water. Boil, uncovered, for ten minutes; drain and throw into a dish of cold water. Allow it to remain a few minutes, then drain, chop fine and rub through sieve. Have one quart of hot milk; rub one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour to a paste; add to the hot milk and stir until it thickens. Mix a few spoonfuls of this with the lettuce pulp, stir until blended, and add to the soup. Season to taste with salt and pepper, let simmer about five minutes, uncover and serve with croutons.

Ana Thompson.

An Ill Wind.

"If nature had made me an ostrich," said young Mr. Lang, one morning, quite exasperated, "perhaps I could eat your cooking." "Yes, wouldn't that be fine," replied the wife, "then I would be able to get some new plumes for my winter hat."—National Monthly.

WHAT WAR MEANS.

Wanton Destruction May Mark the Progress of an Army.

"All is fair in love and war," runs the old saying, and Mr. E. A. Vizetelly in his volume of reminiscences, "My Days of Adventure," proves the truth of it. Referring to the appearance of the railway station at Nantes during the Franco-German war, he says:

"Never since have I seen anything resembling it. A thousand panes of glass belonging to windows or roofing had been shattered to atoms. Every mirror in either waiting or refreshment rooms had been pounded to pieces, every gilt frame broken into little bits. The clock lay about in small fragments; account books and printed forms had been torn to scraps; partitions, chairs, tables, benches, boxes, nests of drawers, had been hacked, split, broken, reduced to mere strips of wood; the large stoves were overturned and broken, and the marble refreshment counter, some thirty feet long and previously one of the features of the station, now strewn the floor in particles, suggesting gravel. It was indeed an amazing sight, the more amazing as no such work of destruction could have been accomplished without extreme labor."

"When we returned to the inn for dinner I asked some questions."

"Who did it?"

"The first German troops that came here," was the answer.

"Why did they do it? Was it because your men had cut the telegraph wires and destroyed some of the permanent way?"

"Oh, no! They expected to find something to drink in the refreshment room, and when they discovered that everything had been taken away they set about breaking the fixtures."

Steam Power.

The name of the first man to discover the power of steam will never be known. As early as 180 B. C., at Alexandria, Egypt, we hear of "Hero's engine," a sort of steam using engine. From the time of Hero to the seventeenth century the subject is unheard of. About 1691, Giovanni Battista della Porta wrote a treatise on the steam engine. The great name in the history of steam and its application is James Watt, 1763.

A Wonderful Gorge.

Yosemite valley, in the southern part of the Yosemite National park, is a great gorge about seven miles long and three-fourths of a mile wide, with a level park like meadow in its center. The great cliffs which form the wall of the valley rise almost vertically to a height of about 3,000 feet, and in many places are beautiful waterfalls which have a vertical drop of from 600 to 900 feet.

Our Daughters.

"I say, dad, I've just accepted Charlie Brown. He's in the drawing room, and if you've a minute to spare you might pop in and see him and talk it over, but please be quick; we've got to rush out and see about the banns."—London Opinion.

Truth About Royalty.

The first king was no more than a fortunate soldier.—Voltaire.

Outing and Sports Hats

If you are looking for an outing hat you may be sure that a sailor shape in one of the numerous varieties in which the sailor is made is to be found that will be becoming to you. It appears that about everything that has a brim of moderately regular width is classed under this name and it is really a matter of convenience to have it so.

Outing hats are usually pressed shapes of straw or hemp which are bought ready for lining and trimming. They are trimmed with wings or feathers or novelties that will stand more or less of the wear and tear of daily use. For trimming them, durable wings, feather breasts, pompons, strong ribbons and ornaments, especially manufactured for them, are brought out each season.

The hat for summer sports needs no trimming. The simplest of bands as a finish, or a flat bow at most, is appropriate for head-wear that fulfills its mission when it covers the head, stays on and shades the eyes. Two pretty examples of sports hats are shown in the illustration given here. One of them is of white corduroy and the other of white satin. They are comfortable and beautiful and their life is a short but very busy one, lasting about six weeks in the heart of the summer.

The outing hat pictured is of white hemp trimmed with a long white wing springing from a feather base. Two jet pins are thrust through the wing and shape. There is a narrow band of white ottoman ribbon about the base of the crown.

LITTLE GIRLS' SUMMER HATS.

Hats for little girls are quaint in shape and are adorned with clusters of small flowers, ribbon or lace. Frequently the underbrims are lined with chiffon or tulle.

greeted me pleasantly and wanted to know just what my business was. I told him that I represented the American Press Association, that furnished many of the leading newspapers of the United States with illustrations of the big news events of the world.

"Ah, America—it is such a fine country," said Villa. "I will do anything to help you out. But," he added, with a fine sense of humor, "I'm afraid you will never get any pictures of a rebel defeat. There won't be any."

Bitterly Opposed to Drink.

"Villa then took me among his officers and introduced me and asked that I be shown every courtesy. I had been with him only a few days when I learned that he would not stand for any drinking among his men. It appears that he had read of the edict against drinking in the United States navy, and he told me that it impressed him deeply. At any rate, drink was positively forbidden. From what I was told by officers under Villa, many previous revolutions in Mexico had lost out because of the fondness of the revolutionists for mescal, a strong brandy."

"When we entered the town of Gomez Palacio, Villa gave orders that every saloon in town should close at once. The second day we were there I was with Villa when he left me abruptly, pointing to five of his men who were coming along one of the side streets much the worse for liquor. Villa came upon them suddenly and demanded to know where they got their drink. At first in a maudlin way they sought to deceive Villa. When he sternly commanded them to tell the position. On this elevation the federal gunners had a powerful searchlight. As soon as Villa's men would show themselves on the plain below they would be blinded by the rays of the searchlight and raked by federal guns. Villa took in the situation right away and gave orders that there should be no more night fighting."

Conference at Midnight.

"At midnight there was a momentous conference in General Villa's car. Villa outlined his line of battle. He divided his forces so that they surrounded the city. Practically half the night was occupied by the silent marching of the different divisions of the army as they took up their respective positions. They all had been distributed by 4 o'clock in the morning and were given a chance to get a few hours' sleep. The federal forces did not know what to think of the silence. We learned later that they had heard of the arrival of Villa and were fearful of what might happen. But they thought their position on the elevation in the center of the city was impossible of capture."

"Villa's orders were to begin a general attack from all points at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. At that hour there were bugle calls. It seemed, from everywhere, and Villa's entire army sprang to the attack. It was splendidly timed. There wasn't a hitch. From their eminence in the center of the town the federals poured forth a killing fire. But when their fire was directed at one point of the compass on came a great horde of Villa's men from another. Wherever a line seem-

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Municipal Venture.

NERVOUS little dark skinned man was in the store with Henry Clossy and concentrated with peevish persistence upon books, invoices, bills and receipts when a committee of four members of the city council, including the mayor, entered, with much pomp and ceremony.

In deference to his official capacity Mr. Boyler and Mr. Kerr and Mr. Scorpine allowed Mayor Sawberry to take up a position about two feet in front of them, and in solemn array, hats held formally across their left wrists, they awaited the attention of the proprietor.

Mr. Clossy came forward, with scant

"You may have it. It will cost you exactly $60,000."

graciousness. "Well?" he demanded peremptorily.

The mayor cleared his throat. "We represent Spangerville, the people and the city council," he began solemnly, and looked back at his followers to see if they were fully supporting him. His eye was attracted immediately to one of the stoutest of the group, however, against the pane of which was fastened the nose of a face otherwise entirely concealed by a radiating pink beard of the most inflammatory anarcho type. Needless to say, that face was Blackie Daw's!

"Very well," responded Mr. Clossy, his gaze also riveted to the face in the window, each eye of which at that moment successively winked shut.

"It has come to the ears of the city council that you have found the city water of use, necessity and profit in an art manufacture known as glazed inlay. Is this allegation true?" And the mayor, annoyed with himself, but unable to resist the fascination, turned again to find the face at the window pane. It was not there, he was relieved to note, but suddenly it appeared at the other window so low down that only the nose and eyes were visible above a pile of gingham. Much disconcerted, the mayor repeated his question.

"Since it is nobody's business I decline to answer," responded Mr. Clossy, watching Blackie with mild pleasure, as that earnest detective slowly straightened to his full height, his nose sliding against the glass all the way up.

"You hold a patent for such a process, though," the mayor charged, studiously resisting the impulse to look behind him. "You might as well answer that much, because Congressman Darlings sends me the Patent Office Record free and I have looked it up."

"Then you know that I obtained a patent," said Clossy dryly.

"It has come to the ears of this body," went on the mayor, looking rigidly out of the back door to prevent his head from turning, "that you have made over $40,000 from this patent in less than three years and that you're taking in from it over $25,000 a year. Is this allegation true?"

"I refuse to answer."

"You don't need to!" retorted the mayor warmly. "The city council has absolute proof." It was almost impossible not to look again at that show window, but Mayor Sawberry accomplished it and gazed stonily through the back door at the high board fence. "Now, the city council, which only wants its rights, Mr. Clossy, has decided on this: It will take over the manufacture of your glazed inlay, make it a municipal enterprise, charge you nothing for the use of our valuable natural resource and pay you a fair and reasonable royalty on the output. The question before us for dispassionate and friendly argument is, What is the least royalty that will satisfy you?"

A fond light kindled in Henry Clossy's eyes. "I have been waiting for this happy moment," he gayly informed them, and thereupon he emptied himself of all the bitterness that had been clogging his system since he was a boy.

"In conclusion," he went on, smiling sweetly in his black beard. "I have not forgotten that you cringing welps came to obtain possession of my patent on glazed inlay. You may have it. It will cost you exactly $60,000; no more, no less. Thanking you, one and all, for your kind attention, I bid you a pleasant good morning."

The mayor and the committee were speechless with rage, surprise and many other emotions too complicated to assort. Some vigorous denunciation might nevertheless have come from some of them if there had not appeared at that moment above the board fence a solemn face wearing yellow Dunderbarys a foot long and a pair of huge blue goggles. Needless to say that face belonged to Blackie Daw, and the mayor was so disconcerted by the sight that, with a parting puff of his cheeks, he turned and stalked rapidly out of the store, followed by the entire committee.

They were not to escape so easily, however, for just at the corner of the alley the tireless detective, now wearing a flawless Vandyke, met them with three separate blis.

"We are on his trail!" he declared. "He has sold his store and collected the money! He leaves town tonight on the 7:30 train, never to return! He will take the glazed inlay patent with him! Look!" And before their very eyes he plucked off his Vandyke, put it under his arm, handed them a telegram and replaced the beard, though upside down.

The mayor opened the telegram and read it with keen interest, then passed it silently to the other members of the committee. It was from Mr. Tuttle, in New York, addressed to Henry Clossy and said:

Entertaining proposition apply glazed inlay table and dresser tops how much. Saluting them, Blackie wheeled and entered the alley mouth. They watched him while he stopped at a dry goods store and emptied his pockets from all his pockets. When he began pointing at them successively with his forefinger and saying, "Eny, meeny, miny, moe," to determine which set he should wear next the committee hastily left.

As the result of their deliberations the city clerk was sent to Mr. Clossy with an offer of $10,000 and a royalty for his patent. The city clerk came back with a counter offer of $60,000 cash! The city council offered $20,000 and royalty. The answer was the same. They offered $30,000 and no royalty.

Same answer. Blackie Daw, wearing a Francis Joseph makeup, dashed in upon the worried city council with another stolen telegram. It was from Chicago and said:

Shall you please come to 135 South Clark street. ANTONIO SCERLATTI.

That telegram settled the business. The mystery of it was what did the work. Just thirty minutes before the bank closed the city council accepted Henry Clossy's offer of $60,000 cash for his patent on the process of making glazed inlay and for his written agreement never to engage in that or a similar enterprise as long as he lived nor to sanction such an enterprise; also, at their dictation, he wrote a letter to Mr. Tuttle advising that art agent of the sale and that the glazed inlay, henceforth and forever, was the property of the Spangerville city council.

Before the 7:30 pulled out that night Wallingford, Blackie and Henry Clossy, each with $20,000 of official money in his pocket, sat at a cozy table in the dining car when an agitated knocking came at the window. Looking out, they saw the panting committee.

Wallingford hurried out to the rear platform. "We want Henry Clossy to sign this telegram," puffed the mayor breathlessly. "The city council 'll pay for it." Since the telegram proved to be nothing more than an order forbidding Mr. Tuttle to have the city water of Spangerville analyzed, Wallingford promised that they should have it and, hurrying in, obtained Clossy's signature. He returned to the committee with a sadly grieved countenance.

"Gentlemen, you have made a hideous mistake," he told them as he handed the mayor the telegram. "Mr. Clossy has never made a penny from the glazed inlay, and he just refused to sell the patent to a furniture factory because the best offer he could get was $500."

"It's a lie!" gulped the mayor. "You can't fool us. We seen his bank statement."

"Those receipts consisted entirely of royalties from the sale of plaster dogs," Wallingford suavely explained.

"From what?" gasped the mayor.

"Plaster dogs," repeated Wallingford calmly, and from his pocket he produced a copy of the canine whose for lornness had started Henry Clossy on the road to a comfortable fortune.

The consternation on the faces of the four members of the committee was as the balm of Gilead to the soul of Henry Clossy; and Blackie, sitting opposite him, and studying in friendly admiration the whiskered face of the artist, made a sudden discovery.

"You're about a week late in your trip to Chicago, aren't you?" he inquired.

"How do you know?" sharply asked Clossy, turning upon him a scared countenance.

"By the streaks of rust in your chin-chillas," laughed Blackie, tickled immensely by his discovery. "Am I some detective? I am!" And he jumped up from the table.

"Where are you going?" demanded Clossy, jumping up also, his usually ruddy face now turning a deep scarlet.

"To explain the fatal mystery!" replied Blackie. "It'll sting them worse than anything."

"No, you don't!" cried Clossy, starting after him, but Blackie had already passed Wallingford at the door, and was leaning out over the platform.

while the conductor was swinging his lantern.

"Antonio Scerlati!" he called in clarion tones.

"Robber!" yelled the committee as Henry Clossy laid hold of Blackie's coat.

"Halt!" shouted Blackie. "I know Henry Clossy's secret!"

Clossy reached farther and grabbed him by the shoulders.

"Antonio Scerlati!" shrieked Blackie as the train moved away.

"Yes?" encouraged the mayor, quivering with eagerness.

"He is an Italian!" yelled Blackie, and, laughing himself limp, allowed Henry Clossy to pull him inside.

"What's the fuss?" asked Wallingford as he followed them back to the table.

Clossy grinned sheepishly. "S. Holmes had me scared stiff," he confessed, blushing, as he revealed the dark secret of his life. "He made me think that he was going to tell the official gossips of Spangerville that I've been going to Chicago every two weeks for the last three years to have Antonio Scerlati dye my whiskers."

THE PARCEL POST.

The farmers are not making the best use possible of the parcel post. That is a recognized fact. They are getting enormous numbers of packages from the cities, but they are not selling by mail. Probably they will do more of this as time goes by. They are not prone to jump into new things very rapidly. Many of them have not as yet thought of making use of the new system of marketing. Some, however, are advertising in city papers and no doubt are building up connections which will be good for them and for city people.—Farm and Fireside.

UTILITY OF THE SKUNK.

It Destroys Many Harmful Insect Pests.

(Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

The skunk stands among the most important animals that choose for their diet insects harmful to the farmer. It is the best known enemy of army worms, including the common army worm, the wheat head army worm and the fall army worm, all of which are destructive to small grains, corn and grasses and cause heavy losses every year to farmers.

Two kinds of tobacco worms, which also attack tomato and potato plants, are eaten by the skunk in large numbers. These worms change their diet from tobacco to tomatoes with such adaptability that they have spread over wide areas in the United States. The skunk's eagerness for the worm is such that he will dig them out from the ground in great numbers in the late summer and destroy them.

The white grub is also dug for by the skunk and consumed by him, and the strawberry growers generally regard this animal with favor, even though in its eager search for the grubs it may uproot the plant or eat a few berries. The skunk also eats many mature May beetles and June bugs, which hatch from the white grubs.

Skunks also destroy the hop grub and grasshoppers, cutworms, crickets, sphinx moths, sweet potato beetles, Colorado potato beetles, field mice and rats. The animal is especially useful in destroying the rats and mice that commonly infest farm buildings. If a skunk takes up his residence near premises where these rats are abundant it will remain there if not disturbed until practically all the rodents are destroyed.

Skunks are accused of destroying beehives. It is true that skunks suffer little, if any, from the stings of bees, and one is said to be able to destroy practically a whole colony of bees in a few visits. However, the possibilities of this animal attacking an apiary may be entirely avoided by placing the hives upon a high bench.

Hot Water All the Time. When hot water is needed in considerable quantity, as at hog killing time, and when a big kettle is not available the device illustrated here will be found very serviceable. A big barrel such as used for vinegar is mounted on a sled. On one side two holes are bored, one above the other, and a U shaped two inch pipe inserted. A brace is fastened to the upper leg of the pipe and also to the side of the barrel, the latter by means of a short, stout screw. The cracks around the pipes are caulked with oakum, cotton or other convenient material. When finished the barrel is filled with water and the pipe placed over a fire. The water will soon be hot and keep so. If the pipe is very short a metal screen should be placed between the fire and the barrel.—Orange Judd Farmer.

NEW RATES MEET RAILROADS' LOSS

$16,000,000 Advance More Than Effaces Income Slump. AMOUNTED TO $14,000,000

Interstate Commerce Commission Order Is Looked Upon as Boon—Possible Changes—Board May Modify Some Schedules Without Affecting the Raise—Where Rates Go Up.

The order of the interstate commerce commission on application of the railroads in official classification territory for permission to make an average increase of 5 per cent in their freight rates, making certain increases that will swell the freight revenues of the eastern carriers about $16,000,000 annually, will be a decided boon, it is contended, and will serve to overcome the actual increases in operating expenses in the last few years.

An increase will be allowed, says the New York Times, in the class rates between Buffalo and Pittsburgh and between Chicago and St. Louis that will more nearly approach the full 5 per cent asked for than the increases allowed on class rates in any other railroad territory. The increase in class rates, it is understood, will not apply to New England and territory east of the Hudson river.

Forty Million More Revenue.

In 1913 the freight revenues of the eastern railroads involved in the effort to obtain an advance in rates were $908,250,788. An average of 5 per cent of this revenue would be $45,412,539, which is a little more than three times the amount of revenues that the interstate commerce commission estimates will be produced by the increased rates granted by its decision. But the commission contends that if the railroads abolish free service and make other economies that the commission will suggest there will be an additional saving of about $25,000,000. This amount, added to the amount derived from the actual increases, would swell the revenues by more than $40,000,000, or something like $30,000,000, or $10,000,000 less than the railroads asked for.

The first evidence submitted by the eastern railroads in their application was an exhibit showing that in the three years preceding their operating expenses had increased faster than their gross earnings and that net earnings had returned nothing on the capital invested in those three years. The net operating income, the railroads contended and backed up the statement by the figures, actually decreased $14,000,000. The commission may have had this amount of loss in mind in granting rate advances that, according to the commission's estimate, will give the railroads an increase of about $16,000,000.

Showed $14,000,000 Decrease.

The application for rate increases involves forty-nine railroads owning 53,670 miles of railway with a total of 116,233 miles of track. From 1910 to 1913 their gross earnings increased $186,000,000. In the same period their operating expenses and taxes increased $201,000,000. There was an increase in tax payments alone from $12,000,000 in 1910 to $14,400,000 in 1913.

In a statement made by the railroads in presenting their case it was said, after noting that the net operating income actually decreased $14,000,000, that "even had these companies made no increase in capital expenditure in the period they would still have been worse off in 1913 by over $14,000,000."

It was asserted by the railroads that in the three years the actual property investment—that is, the cost of railroad and equipment—increased by almost $690,000,000.

The total capital obligations of the forty-nine companies in official classification territory at the time the case was presented to the commission was $6,389,000,000, of which $3,829,000,000 was funded debt and the remainder capital stock. In 1913 the forty-nine eastern companies earned $1,424,000,000 gross. Their net earnings after deducting expenses and taxes were $347,000,000. Their income after payment of interest on the funded indebtedness was $206,000,000. Out of this income the companies declared dividends of 5.10 per cent on the capital outstanding, amounting to $130,000,000, which was $19,000,000 less than the dividends paid out in 1912 and $7,000,000 less than the dividends in 1910.

PLAY ILLUSTRATES SERMON.

Church Members Act Out Story of Courtship of Rebecca.

The Rev. Charles F. Stanley, who holds services in the Sunshine gospel tent at Irvington, N. J., illustrated a sermon on "The Courtship of Rebecca" by having members of his congregation in costume act the story.

The parson's son, Frank, played the part of Isaac; Mrs. Walter A. McMahon of Irvington was Rebecca, and Henry Rudebeck of Hilton, N. J., was Abraham. Others who had parts were Mrs. Ella Rudebeck and Miss Helen Rudebeck of Hilton, Miss Edith White of Newark and Mrs. Jennings of Rockaway. Mrs. William Sherman of Hilton had coached the actors.

MIXED METAPHOR.

A Choice Bunch of "Bulls" From the House of Commons.

There is no place like the house of commons for a "nice derangement of metaphors." It will be a long time before we have a "mixture" equal to the outburst of an effusive orator who said, "The British lion, whether it is roaming the deserts of India or climbing the forests of Canada, will not draw in its horns or retire into its shell."

It recalls the famous "bull" made by Sir William Hart-Dyke, the Unionist ex-minister, who caused uproarious laughter in the house of commons one day by remarking: "The right honorable gentleman has caught big fish in his time. He has gone to the top of the tree to find them."

Alluding to an item of £2,000,000 in the army estimates one year, a certain member described it as "a flea bite in the ocean," while another, advocating an increase in the European troops employed in India, remarked, "You may depend upon it, sir, the pale face of the British soldier is the backbone of the Indian army."

An Irish member speaking of suicide said: "The only way to stop it is to make it a capital offense, punishable with death." It was the same member who assured the house that "as long as Ireland was silent under her wrongs England was deaf to her cries," while it was during a debate on the scandal of packed juries during the Irish troubles that a member in support of the government exclaimed, "By trial by jury have I lived, and by the blessing of God, with trial by jury I will die."

There was a wild howl of delight, too, when some prosy member was careless enough to remark, "The time has come and is rapidly arriving," which is equal to the cry of the member who wished a motion was "at the bottom of the bottomless pit"—London Tit-Bits.

What She Was Doing.

One evening the mother of a small miss aged five said: "I see that you are yawning; it's time you were in bed." "Oh, that wasn't a yawn, mamma," replied Grace. "I was merely practising a new kind of smile."

Evidently Had a Grudge.

"The day isn't far distant when the man in the flying machine will look down upon the automobilist," said the prophetic youth. "And let us hope, too," replied the weary old pedestrian, "that he'll fall down on him, too."

An Old Recipe

To Darken Hair

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turn Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and life to the hair when faded, streaked or gray, also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

For Agonizing Corns

You Can't Beat It

Certainly not, "Putnam's" has 'em all beat a mile. It's a marvel on corns and foot lumps, acts like magic. Why foot nearly fifty years Putnam's Excelsior has been the standard remedy, the dependable one, the sure kind that never disappoints.

It's painless too. Think of it! Paint it on to-night, in the morning the pain is all gone.

Small wonder the sale of Putnam's Corn Extractor is so large, 25c. at dealers everywhere.

TO HAVE PRETTY HAIR

If your hair is not as soft and pretty, or as fresh and full as that of some friend, do as she does—give it daily attention, just the same care you would give a plant to make it healthy and beautiful. Luxuriant hair—soft, fluffy, thick and lustrous—is really a matter of care. If it is too thin, make it grow. If it is too dry and brittle, soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off.

Parisian Sage, an inexpensive tonic, which you can get from any druggist, or from The People's Drug Store, is just what you need—it softens the scalp, nourishes the hair roots, immediately removes dandruff, and makes the hair fluffy, lustrous and abundant. Parisian Sage takes away the dryness, stops itching head, makes the hair twice as abundant and beautifies it until it is soft and lustrous.

By the use of this helpful tonic any woman can easily make her hair fluffy, soft and pretty.

Great Love and Bares Secrets of Letters.

Paris, July 22.—Joseph Caillaux held the court for two hours testifying in defense of his wife, who sat in the prisoner's enclosure, charged with the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, on March 16 last.

The appearance of M. Caillaux was hardly less dramatic than that of Mme. Caillaux. The former premier, still one of the most powerful men in France, dominated the proceedings, imposing upon them his personality and uncommon gifts of leadership.

"I accuse myself," he cried in the climax. "I committed a fault. I should myself have acted, but absorbed by public affairs, I failed to realize the ravages Calmette's calumnies had made on the soul of my wife."

M. Caillaux spoke as if in the chamber, his voice of high tenor, softened in quality, sometimes rising to falsetto in moments of excitement. He gestured freely, pointing a singularly long forefinger as he addressed the judges or the jury, and occasionally it moved in the direction of his wife.

The trial has entered upon its political phase, and those who sat in the court room had occasion to bring to mind that Caillaux is the strong man of the radical groups now ruling France.

He would, he said, tell the jury the history of his private life from his first marriage down to the sad events which caused his presence on the stand. He explained the incident of the two letters, which he supposed had been destroyed before his divorce from his first wife.

He only knew of their existence when a friend warned him that they were about to be published.

When he married Mme. Raynourd he knew for the first time what true happiness was. When he spoke of her Mme. Caillaux blushed crimson and bowed her head in her hands and sobbed silently.

In January, 1914, M. Caillaux had a conversation with Jean Barthou, the former minister of justice, who said: "Your wife (first wife) is very bitter against you. You made a great mistake in writing those letters."

After the publication of the "Thy Joe" letter, M. Caillaux's first wife telephoned him to clear herself of any suspicion he might have had that she was responsible for its divulgence.

"At that time," said M. Caillaux, "I firmly believed that other letters would be published. My wife shared my belief, which was confirmed by information from a number of persons."

Returning into the "Thy Joe" letter he described the effect of its publication on his wife. Finally he became so impregnated with her fears that other letters would be published that he consulted with President Poincare, who had been one of the witnesses of their marriage. The president did his best to reassure him and advised him to consult a lawyer.

"My lawyer told me," continued M. Caillaux, "that nothing could be done. I then said to my wife: 'Be reassured. I will go and smash Calmette's snout myself.' After that I felt relieved in mind, but my wife, on the other hand, was depressed."

"At the police station, on my way home from the senate, I learned of the tragedy. My wife's constant prayer was: 'I hope he is not seriously hurt; I meant only to give him a lesson.'"

ACCUSED OF STARVING WIFE

Wealthy Farmer Purchased Coffin and Dug Grave Weeks Ago.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 22.—Samuel Cunningham, a farmer, of Belle ville, near here, is in the county jail here, awaiting a hearing on charges made by J. E. Mayhew, state humane agent.

Cunningham, reputed to be wealthy, was arrested on a warrant sworn to by Mayhew and charging first degree murder. Mayhew charges that Cunningham starved his wife, Ann Cunningham, to death.

It is alleged in the warrant that Cunningham not only failed to provide his wife with food for twelve days prior to her death last Friday, but that he purchased a coffin and began digging a grave three weeks ago.

Daniels After Navy Pluckers.

Washington, July 22.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels took the first step in his efforts to eliminate the naval "plucking" board by appointing a commission, headed by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, to investigate and recommend a new law to congress.

Fall Kills Nun.

Trenton, N. J., July 22.—Sister M. Veronica, a Sister of Charity, was killed by falling down the cellar-stairway of the convent connected with St. Stanislaus church. It is believed she missed her footing. She was thirty-one years old, and her home was in Suamokin, Pa.

KING GEORGE. Calls Conference at Palace on Home Rule Bill.

The personal intervention of King George in the Ulster crisis has raised hopes that an adjustment may be reached. His majesty has called a conference to meet at Buckingham Palace to discuss the home rule bill. At that conference were represented the government, the Opposition, the Nationalists and the Ulster Covenanters.

M'DERMOTT RESIGNS SEAT IN HOUSE

Faced Expulsion as Result of Lobby Probe.

Washington, July 22.—By resigning from the house of representatives, James T. McDermott, a Democrat, of the Fourth Illinois district, brought to an end the agitation in the house that followed the publication and investigation of the lobby charges made by M. M. Mulhall, ex-agent of the National Association of Manufacturers.

With resolutions proposing punishment ranging from a reprimand to expulsion for his conduct as disclosed in the inquiry, Representative McDermott announced his resignation and asserted that he would seek reelection, "appealing from the judiciary committee of the house to the people of his district."

Chairman Webb, of the judiciary committee, said later that no action would be sought on the report of the judiciary committee recommending resolutions reprimanding McDermott and officers of the National Association of Manufacturers. These resolutions had been fixed for consideration in the house on Thursday.

Representative McDonald, of Michigan, Progressive member of the lobby committee, may make an effort to bring up a resolution introduced by him calling for the expulsion of McDermott, and reprimanding at the bar of the house of the National Association of Manufacturers' officers.

It is expected that the majority will prevent any further proceedings in the matter.

DR. CARMAN GUARDS WIFE

Orders All Persons Off Farm Near Raven Rock, N. J.

Raven Rock, N. J., July 22.—Dr. Edwin Carman, of Freeport, L. I., took steps to insure to his wife, Mrs. Florence Carman, the alleged slayer of Mrs. Louise Bailey, privacy and seclusion on their farm, three miles northeast of this place. All persons have been ordered to remain off the farm.

The death of Mrs. Bailey by the hand of an assassin in Dr. Carman's office in Freeport, N. Y., several weeks ago and the resultant arrest and indictment of Mrs. Carman have made the physician's wife extremely nervous, and her husband has determined that she shall not be annoyed or molested while she is recuperating from the strain.

Thus far no detective or official of Freeport has put in an appearance in the vicinity, although it was reported that when the Carmans left their home on Long Island the sheriff and district attorney had followed them.

Reports of a wild flight in which the Carmans went to Scranton and then doubled back to the Water Gap, stopping at Stroudsburg on the way, in an effort to throw off pursuers, were denied at the farm house.

DEMAND FOR CAPONS IS SURE AND STEADY

[By G. Benov, president of the Kansas Poultry Federation.]

The advantages to be derived from caponizing are many. Capons make considerably larger growth than cockerels, and their flesh remains soft indefinitely. This permits the grower to hold them over the crowded fall market and sell them to best advantage during the winter months. Not only do they make greater weight, but the price per pound is much higher, so the income per bird is considerably increased and the profits correspondingly enlarged.

Further, they are very quiet and docile, not inclined to take vigorous exercise, which makes hard flesh, and never fighting among themselves or annoying the other stock. The experienced poultryman will appreciate relief from these vexations.

The practice of caponizing these surplus males, especially from the late broods, is not only profitable to the producer of poultry for market, but possesses many advantages for the backyard poultryman, who primarily Cockerels may be a source of profit if properly managed—that is, caponized and fattened. Cockerels should be castrated at three months of age, and at the age of ten months they are ready sellers on the market at high prices. To fatten capons keep wheat, cracked corn, milled oats, beef scrap and charcoal constantly before them in hoppers. Toward the end of the fattening period feed a milk mash composed of wheat midds, bran, ground oats and cornmeal. The picture shows a bunch of White Leghorn capons.

aims to supply his own table with fine chickens. A bunch of capons may be kept in a small space and will demand little care and attention. They may be dressed at any age and will be found to be most delicious. They will continue to gain in weight until eight or nine months of age and when full grown can be maintained at slight food cost.

During the entire growing season the poultryman should keep a sharp eye on his flocks of youngsters and early dispose of all pullets which fail to measure up to the required standard of physical perfection. This includes such as are in any way deformed, having twisted toes, crooked backs or breasts, crossbills, etc.; also those which do not develop satisfactorily or give evidence of lacking in stamina or constitutional vigor. None of these deserves a place in the breeding or laying flocks. They are without values themselves and occupy space and demand food and care which might better be devoted to the individuals which give promise of being profitable producers.

There is, moreover, a constant and steady demand for fat, well finished capons.

Poultry Shows.

It is time to begin feeding your exhibition birds for the coming poultry shows if you want to get the prizes. All young birds should be matured so that they will go into the showroom in full feather and weighing very close to the standard requirements. The old birds should be fed so that they will be well over their molt and in full feather before the exhibition season begins.

The Price of a Kid.

Cordova is full of fun, says C. Bogue Luftmann in his "Quiet Days in Spain," and in the leisurely pace of life there the observer has time to see and appreciate all of it.

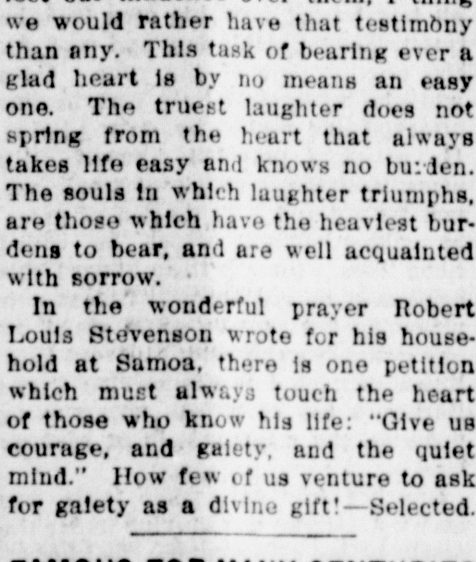

In the market one day a small boy with a big apron and a pompous manner was offering half of a small kid to a woman for a peseta. She objected that it was very tiny, and he fairly smothered her with: "Woman! Do you want half a bull for a tenpence?"

GREAT IS VIRTUE OF GAIETY

Those Who Have Traveled the Hard Roads of Life Will Recognize Its Beneficence.

Gladness is a pilgrim's virtue, and the more our life has within it the quality of the true pilgrimage, the more necessary is joy for its perfection. If we had more mirth in our religion, it would not only be stronger, but more gracious and effective. I do not know if anything finer could be said of any of us than was said by a traveler of his companion:—"So long as the journey lasted, the joy lasted also. There was never a moment but was blissful, never a contretemps, such as is unavoidable on the road, but he, in his beautiful contentment, laughed it away." When our journey is over and friends recollect our influence over them, I think we would rather have that testimony than any. This task of bearing ever a glad heart is by no means an easy one. The truest laughter does not spring from the heart that always takes life easy and knows no burden. The souls in which laughter triumphs, are those which have the heaviest burdens to bear, and are well acquainted with sorrow.

In the wonderful prayer Robert Louis Stevenson wrote for his household at Samoa, there is one petition which must always touch the heart of those who know his life: "Give us courage, and gaiety, and the quiet mind." How few of us venture to ask for gaiety as a divine gift!—Selected.

FAMOUS FOR MANY CENTURIES

Jewel Known as Kohinoor, in the British Diadem, Has Most Remarkable History.

The first owner of the famous Kohinoor or "Mountain of Light" diamond, was, according to legend, the hero Karna, whose deeds are celebrated in the "Mahabharata," and who is said to have carried the great stone some 5,000 years ago. The Kohinoor, brought to England from India and presented to Queen Victoria, made its first authentic appearance in history in the fourteenth century, when Alaeddin carried it to Delhi. At that time it is said to have weighed 793 carats. It appeared in the great diamond market of Golconda in 1550. The lack of skill of a Venetian lapidary, Hortensio Borghese, reduced its weight to 279 carats. After the sacking of Delhi in 1739 the diamond went to Afghanistan, and it belonged in turn to several Afghan rulers. Thence it came into the possession of the Sikh chief, Runjeet Singh. Upon the abdication of the last ruler of the Punjab, and the annexation of his dominions to the British empire, in 1849, the great stone became the property of the East India company, and was by it presented to Queen Victoria. It was recut soon afterward, and now weighs 102 1/4 carats. It is beyond price, although $10,000,000 has been given as a fair valuation.

The Bath.

George C. Boldt, the doyen of the hotel-keeping world, said in New York: "It is now the excellent fashion—and this fashion will be permanent—to build hotels with a bath for every bedroom."

"I remember the time—of course, I was then very young—when baths were not so necessary. In fact, I once overheard a little boy say to his father in a hotel corridor: 'Pa, what are Knights of the Bath?'"

"Why, Saturday nights, of course," the father replied.

"Another time we put a rich old lady from the country—this, too, was ages ago—in our best room, a room with a bath."

"The room clerk asked her in the morning how she had slept. She hid a yawn behind her hand and answered: 'The bed was good, and I'd have slept fine, young man, only I was afraid somebody would be wanting a bath, and the idea of strangers passing back and forth through my room worried me so I just couldn't snatch a wink.'"

Bee's Favorite Color.

The late Sir John Lubbock, one of the most noted authorities on bees, proved by long observation and repeated experiments that blue is the favorite color of the bee, and that next after blue come, in order of preference, white, yellow, red, green and orange. Sir John determined the fact that a bee visits about 25 flowers per minute, and that it always keeps to the same species of flower during each visit to the fields.

THE CONSCIENCE OF MEN.

Consider all thy actions and take heed. On stolen bread, tho' it is sweet to feed. Sin, like a bee, unto thy hive may bring A little honey, but expect the sting. Thou mayst conceal thy deeds by cunning art, But conscience sits a witness in thy heart.

The most honorable men are often the lax in morals when it comes to love affairs. It never occurs to them they are to blame in seeking the society of fair women, enjoying their company, knowing full well that matrimony is out of the question at present. They cannot help but note, if they would, that the woman is growing fonder of them, pinning her faith to pleasant anticipations of the future. When they are called away, never expecting to return to that vicinity, they have no compunction in bidding such sweethearts a hasty, careless farewell. They depart without a qualm of conscience, though they know full well that there are hearts which grieve to death over a misplaced affection—a broken love dream.

Yet such men will go to new places, meet other pretty women and enact the same role over again, until half a score or more wrecked lives should awaken their conscience to pity if not remorse. If one woman happens to pay a man back in his own coin, flit him when he is thoroughly in love with her, he cries out bitterly that she is heartless; that, soon or late, punishment will be meted out to her for drawing him on to love her when she knew she did not reciprocate his tender sentiments.

There's another set of men whose conscience must smite them—those who desert wives and little children for some pretty, girlish face that flits like a will-o'-the-wisp across their paths and fascinates them.

He throws dull care to the winds and tries to be happy. But conscience will not down. Do as he will, the voices of his children ring in his ears. He sees them in his dreams standing mutely by his couch, and hears their piteous cries throughout the night, hearing them plead with him to come back to their desolate hearth. They want him, they need him, they still love him.

The keen lash of conscience has brought many a man back to heart-broken wife and little ones. Though the whole world apart, the man who has conscience in him will yearn for reconciliation. Such men know wife and children cannot, will not, forget them. It is sweet to the heart of the man who has gone wrong to know that they miss him at home. Like a magnet it draws him back to them sooner or later. The man with a conscience can reform. The man who is without it—never.

Java's Teak Forests.

Teak forests in Java cover 1,480,000 acres, and as the area reforested is two and a half times as large as the area felled in a given time, this magnificent stock of timber is continually increasing. A pest of the Java teak plantation is alang grass (Imperata arundinacea). In order to prevent the incursion of this plant, as hoeing is too expensive, the foresters sow a leguminous plant, Leucaena glauca, between the rows of teak seedlings. This chokes the alang, keeps the soil clean and enriches the soil in humus and nitrogen, and ultimately disappears with the increase of the forest cover.

Chains of No Use.

It was a Welsh minister who described the devil to a little congregation in a remote Welsh valley. Said the minister:

"The devil is bound round the middle with chains, and round the arms with chains, and round the legs with chains. But, John Jones," pointing to a man in the front row, "he can reach you; and you, David Evans," pointing to one in the middle row, "he can reach you, and," pointing to one at the back, "John Williams, he can reach you." And then a man in the gallery called out: "Why, he might as well be loose."—Portland Spectator.

Exterminate the Cockroach.
The cockroach acts as an insect porter of typhoid fever, bubonic plague and possibly cancer. Several years ago an epidemic of typhoid fever on a United States ship was proved to be propagated by cockroaches. In a recent issue of the London Lancet, Dr. W. Melville Davison calls attention to the fact that the cause of cancer may be an alga or vegetable micro-organism which is found in the intestines of several species of roaches.

Famous Regiment.
The Buffs, the famous old "Nutcrackers," of which the king of Denmark was appointed colonel-in-chief on his recent visit to England, are one of the oldest corps in the British army. They were evolved from the old trained band in the days of Elizabeth, and because of this ancient connection with the capital they have the privilege of marching through the city of London with fixed bayonets, beating drums and flying colors.

One on Father.

A young minister preached one Sunday to a rural congregation and spent the next day visiting the people. At one house the man of the house was expressing his appreciation of the sermon in very complimentary terms while assisting the minister to put up his team. His little son had followed him and after eyeing the minister a minute or two exclaimed: "Why, papa, you said he was a one horse preacher, but he's got two horses!"—National Monthly.

A WATER RESCUE

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

George MacElroy spent his summers on the Atlantic coast and always owned some sort of boat. The first he owned was a skiff with a leg-o-mutton sail; the second was a dory, rigged in the same way; the third a twenty foot single-sticker, and when he reached the age of twenty his father gave him a yacht, capable of sleeping half a dozen persons comfortably.

George found it all he could do to run his yacht on his limited income. Indeed, he could not have done so at all had he not been his own captain, quartermaster, cabin boy and cook for the greater part of the time. Once while laying up near New York he was attacked and robbed by river pirates. He at once provided himself with arms, including a couple of small cannon forward and a single gun of greater caliber astern, which he called Long Tom. After getting aboard this armament he felt easier. Unless surprised he felt that he could stand off any ordinary gang. But to avoid loneliness he took into his service Cyrus Barker, a boy of fifteen, who was at home on the water and ill at ease on land.

One hot July day, when there was no wind, George was moving under the power of his motor engine, making toward Portland, Me., from the south. He had the lighthouses on his port quarter standing out white in the sun, but he was rather interested in a yacht to the westward of him. She was some seventy tons burden and very trim. No one but a rich person could have afforded to run her. While MacElroy was looking at her the day tending from her stern was lowered and raised again, union down, which is a signal of distress. It remained flying for about a minute, when it was hauled down and replaced as it had been before.

George was puzzled. The yacht was moving along at a steady rate of about eight knots and did not seem in any way crippled. There was no likelihood of illness aboard or want of supplies. For Portland was within an hour's sail. The signal seemed to be for the Hope—George's yacht—for he was much nearer than any other vessel to the boat that had signaled. Something must be wrong aboard of her.

"George pointed the Hope to incline toward the signaling yacht. When this day was righted it had been done in a hurry, as though some one was offended that it had been put up union down. Perhaps persons were aboard who needed assistance. If so it behooved the skipper of the Hope to keep a sharp lookout and be on his guard at the same time.

In the course of an hour the Hope was sailing directly astern of the yacht and about a mile distant. Cy Barker was on the fore-castle and sang out that there was a woman's sunshade floating on the water ahead. George put the Hope on a line with it, and on reaching it Cy picked it up. It had been used to buoy a bottle containing a note written in a woman's hand:

"Help! I am kidnaped by my guardian who is taking me to an insane asylum."

EMMA BORLAND.

"Here's an adventure and no mistake," said George to Cy. "I've counted three men on the yacht, and we don't know how many more there are, but we've got guns and ammunition enough to sink her, and we must effect a rescue. She's evidently not going into Portland; she'll probably lose herself among the islands to the eastward—that is, if she's trying to throw any one off the track. We must catch her before dark or lose her. Get up the ammunition for the two forward barkers and load them."

George put on all his power and gained rapidly on the yacht, whose name—the Swallow—now appeared on her stern. She did not seem to fear the Hope till George sent a shot after her, which he aimed to go a cable's length to the starboard, and then so great was the surprise of her crew that they didn't seem to know what to do. But presently another shot, still nearer, caused them to shut off their power. George when he came within halting distance did the same.

"What do you want?" was called from the Swallow.

"The person of Emma Borland."

"On what authority?"

"On the authority of myself. Send her to me in a boat or I'll rake you fore and aft. I've three big guns aboard."

There was evidently a prolonged consultation on the Swallow. What was said, whatever their reasons for as sending to his demand, George did not know, but presently a boat put out and was pulled for the Hope. George and Cy kept it covered with rifles.

When it came alongside there sat a very pretty girl and her maid. George helped them aboard, the boat pulled back to the Swallow, and she sailed away.

Miss Borland had got one of the crew, who was at the wheel, on her side, and he permitted her to hoist a distress signal.

George took the women to Portland and engaged a lawyer for Miss Borland, who had no difficulty in establishing her sanity. Her guardian left for parts unknown and has not been since heard from.

George now runs a much finer yacht than the Hope, but it required the fortune of Emma Borland to buy and run it. She gave it to him with herself for the inestimable service he had done her.

Civil War Mock Currency.
An antiquarian society has recently obtained one of the most interesting collections in the country. It consists of the commercial tokens and mock coins issued by tradesmen during the Civil war when small change of the government stamp became a rarity. There are in the collection about one thousand nine hundred varieties of tokens.

Difference in Lives.

It costs to send. To give a message to the world, to express one's personality in one's time calls for a real expenditure. That is why small and selfish lives are only receivers, while those lives which bless mankind have given of their substance and of their selves.

Parable of Life.

There is a wireless telegraph apparatus in a certain home and the boys explain that they can only receive but not send. "It takes power to send, and power costs." So they fling out their aerial to catch messages from far and near, and never send a message in return. The incident is a parable of life.

Truth vs. Falsehood.

Truth is irresistible. Falsehood may for a time stay its progress, but it cannot prevent its eventual triumph. An economic fact, founded on nature, will win its way despite the combined forces of those who benefit by inequitable customs and wicked laws. There can be but one conclusion to the battle of truth vs. falsehood.

Learn to Forget.

Caesar was so ready to forgive that even Cicero, who was by no means a constant friend to him, relates, as a singular proof of his noble heart, that he never used to forget anything except the wrong done to him. Indeed, to pardon is a most beautiful revenge; but to forget is still more beautiful.—Petrarch.
